THIS Edition is limited. The cost has been met mainly from private contributions. This Atlas deserves a permanent place in the office of every school official and every school superintendent. The facts herein presented must underlie and determine, in a large measure, the State's educational program and policy during the decade from 1920 to 1930. Similar compilations and comparisons cannot be made again until the findings of the next decennial census have been announced.

FOREWORD

HIS SCHOOL ATLAS has been compiled in order to supply school officials, trustees, teachers, and patrons the most definite available data concerning our educational system. Both the maps and the statistical tables are intended to present forty-eight concrete illustrations of public school problems and progress.

The idea was suggested by a similar publication made in Louisiana several years ago. The materials have been selected from the latest and most reliable sources. The facts have been derived partly from the United States Census of 1920, partly from the State Superintendent's Report for the scholastic year 1920-21, and partly from preliminary reports for the current scholastic year 1921-22.

The status of our schools may be easily criticized, but criticism has been carefully avoided. Suggestive comparisons can and should be made, and students of the Atlas are urged to make such comparisons for themselves.

Disparities among the forty-six counties may be seen on nearly every page. The Legislature has sought steadily and progressively in recent years to establish a minimum school opportunity for every child in the State. This principle will result in State standards and State support, supplementary to local and county activities. Such a program requires constant effort and rigid economy.

If these maps can aid the pupils, teachers, trustees, patrons and taxpayers of the State in the development of our schools, the purpose of the Atlas will have been fully realized.

There are 185 cotton mills in the State, 169 of these are paying a special school tax ranging from three to nineteen mills, to say nothing of school bonds.

The above is a conservative estimate of the amounts contributed by the mills of the State for the past year over and above their regular taxes, not counting any items of less than one thousand dollars. This was spent for buildings, equipment, teachers' salaries, janitors, fuel and incidentals.
